FRENCH REVOLUTION DEALT WITH IN THREE PAPERS READ BEFORE HISTORICAL CLUB

Addresses on Mirabeau, Vergniaud and Robespierre.
Three Typical Leaders of the Revolution

A GOOD SUMMARY FROM ALL POINTS OF VIEW

Some of the Influences Behind the Worlds Greatest Social Upheaval

Last night the Historical Club held one of the most interesting and instructive meeting since the opening of the season.

The subject was one of great interest to all students of history and was treated in a masterly and scholarly fashion that was appreciated and enjoyed by all present.

The subject of the evening was the French Revolution and it was divided into three papers, which took up separately the three principal and outstanding figures of that epoch making period.

Mirabeau was the subject of the first paper and was ably read by Mr. Pedley. Mr. Pedley treated his subject in a light, humorous style which tended towards impressing his remarks upon his hearers.

Mr. Pedley gave a brief summary of Mirabeau's early life. He was wild and unrestrained; hated by his father he spent many years of his life in exile and in prison. His early life was also marked by the strength and violence of his passions. He had several love affairs.

Before the Revolution had been started by the summoning of the State-General, Mirabeau had become known as an historical writer. When after 160 years the State-General was finally called by the King, Mirabeau, was present as one of the representatives of the people.

From the first Mirabeau headed the assembly. His theory of things was that government exists that people may pursue life in peace and quiet. Government to do this must be strong and to be strong it must be harmony with the people.

Mirabeau was moderate in his view. He had earlier in his life visited England and while there had made a careful study of her constitution. Later in France he tried to adopt the same principles. He believed in an absolute veto for the king because he believed as in England such a power would never be exercised except when backed by the full force of public opinion.

Mirabeau believed in the system of Assignats but with this qualification that they should not be issued to more than half the value of the land sold.

In 1791 Mirabeau died. His death caused great confusion. All Paris was hushed. He was buried in the Chapel of St. Genevieve. He is one of the truly great men of the period.

Mr. Corbett read his paper on Vergniaud which proved exceedingly interesting. The reader showed an extensive knowledge of his subject, and his paper was the result of considerable study and research. Vergniaud represented the party of the Gironde, the moderates, who at the time when he came to Paris were under the domination and at the call of Madame Roland. From his youth up Vergniaud had shown a quiet, melancholy and solitary disposition, coupled with a love of oratory and a power of language.

Elected to the Assembly his first stand was on the question of emigration. He declared that those of the nobles who had left the country should be summoned to return and if they did not sentence of death should be passed upon them.

At this time Louis was suspected of plotting with outside powers. The Gironde party agitated for war. Vergniaud incited the people who raised themselves into a frenzy. In April, 1792, war was declared.

One of the great questions in which he was involved was that of the guilt and sentence of the King. Vergniaud opposed the execution of the king, he wished for an appeal to the people on this question. In this he was over-ruled.

Coach Roberts also looked happy. He is confident that History is going to repeat itself.

If ice worthy of the name can be found anywhere near the City on Saturday, the team will have an ice practice instead of the gym work-out. This should do much to put the team in final shape, and is more particularly to be desired, as some of our competitors have the lead of is in this respect.

The Hockey Squad held another strenuous work-out in the Gymnasium. Over twenty men turned out, some veterans and some cubs. All worked faithfully and a keen brisk practice resulted. Among those present were Pontbunt, who looks good, McGregor, an old Dalhousie man, Fawcett, Falls, who is looking for a goal position, Montgomery, Sutherland from R.M.C., Graham, and Kendall, who bids fair to be a backbone to the defence. Gillis, Sergeant, Rankin, and Foreman also worked well.

The Squad was looked after by Tom Graydon and Manager Roberts. They were put through the usual basketball and skipping stunts. The new men were then addressed by the Manager, who asked them to work hard and stick to it so as to make it interesting for the older men.

EDITORIAL

It is at this period of the session that the strain of two months hard and continuous work is first felt by all Undergraduates, and the happy release of the Xmas vacation is anxiously awaited. After this period of strenuous work, occupying the major portion of the time of each of us, we are, unless we have led an extremely healthy life, less alert and less capable of absorbing the large amount of new matter which is of necessity put before us in a College Course.

Students labour under a great disadvantage, in that they are required to do a large amount of brain work, whilst living a life which is for most of us, almost notoriously unhealthy, and it is our duty to our Alma Mater as well as to ourselves to make the best of the opportunities which are offered us of remedying to some extent at least, the effects of the sedentary life natural to our present vocation.

First comes the matter of fresh air. It is highly important to everyone that they should take full advantage of the vitalising and regenerative powers of this truly priceless commodity. This we may do to some extent by living in well ventilated rooms. This however, is not sufficient and each of us should spend a reasonable portion of each day in the open air.

Our next consideration is that of exercise. Many forms are open to men who care to take them up, and of these swimming, hockey, basketball, boxing, wrestling, gymnastics, and physical drill, are the ones that immediately come to mind. Any of these may be indulged in at little cost either of time or money, and it is hardly necessary for us to enlarge upon the benefits which are undoubtedly derived from these forms of exercise. However, the fact remains that only a small proportion of students do or will avail themselves of these opportunities. To these we would say "walk." Walking is the finest all round exercise known to man, and when combined with the beneficial influence of fresh air, it is well calculated to keep one in good condition.

The matter of diet is one which does not receive the attention it merits. Not only are we dependent on the quantity, but also on the quality and nature of the food which is used by our bodies to supply the energy necessary for our many activities. Each individual finds from experience that certain articles of diet are suited, and others unsuited to him, and he should take care to see that he obtains the benefit of such experience by the choice of suitable food.

Sleep is another important factor in the maintenance of health. Again in this case, different individuals require different amounts for the preservation of their health, and it is only on the personal experience of each that any definite rule can be found. However it is safe to say that none of us can do with less than six hours, and that eight hours is a more suitable allowance for the majority. If we reduce this, even for the purpose of study, less useful work is actually done, since the efficiency of the brain is inevitably lowered and poorer and slower work results.

The final aspect of the question with which we will now deal is the subject of recreation. No one of us can afford to live without some of the pastimes or hobbies which go so far to make life agreeable, but here again we are met with the remarkable divergence of human tastes. Perhaps in no way is the disparity between different natures better seen than in the different forms of amusement which appeal to them most, and it is therefore quite impossible to deal in a general manner with this subject. But notwithstanding there is no doubt that each one of us should see that sufficient time is devoted to recreation.

Thus we have shown that to pass through a session, successfully and pleasantly, it is up to each of us to see that sufficient of his time, attention and energy are devoted to the various components which together make up the true University life.

ASSAULT AT ARMS WILL BE HELD A WEEK FROM TO-MORROW

Programme has been Drawn up and Novice's Competitions will be a Feature

The Executive of the Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Club are making arrangements to hold an Assault At Arms on Saturday, Dec. 14th. The programme is to include several classes for novices; these classes will be open to any who have never boxed in a competition before, and will be at the following weights in boxing and wrestling—120lbs; 130lbs; 140 lbs; 150lbs; 160lbs and heavyweight. It will be noted that all these weights are 5lbs above the regular weights; the idea of this arrangement of the weights is that those who would be entering for, say the 115lbs class, will be able to box in that class even though they be 5lbs over weight, it being assumed that they could take off 5lbs for a competition. All those who wish to enter for these competitions should give notice at once—either by putting their names on the lists posted in the gymnasium, or by leaving a note for the President of the Club in the Union, stating the class for which they wish to enter.

In addition to these competitions there will be some contests between McGill men and members of other clubs. Some members of the M.A.A. A. have been invited to participate in these events, but up to date nothing has been definitely arranged. The programme will also include fencing bouts and possibly sparring.

MINING SOCIETY

The last of a series of five lectures by Dr. Macrae was given before the Mining Society last night.

The lecturer first dealt with the various effects of excessive heat commonly known as Heat and Sunstrokes.

These attacks while generally due to direct exposure to the Sun's rays may sometimes occur while the patient is under cover—for instance cases have been known where men in the hospitals have been overcome while lying in their beds.

The chief effects of Heat Stroke are insensibility and a very high temperature—frequently as high as 109.5° C.

In discussing the actual meaning of the term Sunstroke Dr. Macrae said it was impossible to really define it. It might be called a "knock out" of the heat regulator in the body—this heat regulator being situated somewhere in the brain though the precise location was uncertain. The treatment for these strokes consists in cooling off the patient as soon as possible—by placing ice to the head if available or by sousing clothes in a cold stream and applying them to the back of the head and forehead.

The lecturer then dealt with various forms of convulsions—caused by poisoning.

But in any case the symptoms of poisoning are sufficiently definite to show that the patient is suffering from some form or another. The treatment is very general. It consists in diluting the acid—by pouring oil and milk down the throat if the patient is conscious, but dangerous if unconscious as the liquid will probably find its way down the windpipe. It is a mistaken idea to try and make the patient vomit as the acid will turn again on the return journey.

In the case of non-corrosive poisons—to induce vomiting is the best method and if done quickly results in nearly all the forer being recovered. An accessory condition of all poisoning cases is shock—keep the patient warm and after vomiting give stimulants. While dealing with cases of poisoning Dr. Macrae sternly deprecated the publishing of suicide stories in the papers. These stories, he said, had a great influence on other people of morbid tendencies and suicides were notoriously imitative in their methods. Poisoning by gunshot wounds was then dealt with.

These are not so serious with modern high velocity firearms as with old-fashioned weapons—as the modern high speed bullet which is very hot, sears the wound in its path and thus acts as a self-cauterizer.

Alcoholic poisoning was then discussed by the lecturer at some length—after which the men present were divided into groups of four. A practical demonstration of various forms of bandaging was given by the students. Dr. Macrae expressed himself as very well satisfied with the skill shown—which he said was only what he had expected from such mechanically trained men as M. students.

The meeting then adjourned after voicing its opinion of Dr. Macrae's lectures by hearty applause.

PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY HELD INTERESTING MEETING

Paper on Substance Read by Mr. R. B. Stevenson

The third meeting of the above society took place at the residence of Dr. Hickson on Wednesday evening, when a paper was given by Mr. R. B. Stevenson on "Substance." The speaker dealt with a new view which regards substance not as the "essence" of everything, but as the "relations" of all objects of thought in human experience.

We have reason to think that there is no essence which is common alike to thought and to physical objects. Yet all systems, which fail to bridge this gap between mental and physical phenomena, involve us in a dangerous dualism. Now just in as much as we have an awareness of matter and thought these two phases of existence combine in our experience as the primal reality. Everything that we know anything about stands in a definite relation to our experience. This experience or Substance may be defined as the one universal constant in terms of which we measure all the objects of thought.

The systems of the past have been concerned with finding the essence of everything. Spinoza and others in their efforts to reach a consistent monism have done violence to nature. The result has been an attempt to cramp everything in an enclosed system where necessity is the only law. Another group of thinkers represented by Descartes have frankly confessed a bewildering dualism which presents a fork in the road at every step. Berkeley and Locke we may consider as examples of a third school of thought. They set out to achieve an idealistic monism. But in them the old dualism is perpetuated in a more refined form. They have the merit of banishing crude matter and metaphysical abstractions and of rigidly insisting that reality must be interpreted in terms of consciousness. Yet even Berkeley's system is divided against itself and cannot stand. His dualism is between consciousness and its content. This feature of his system is in accordance with a theory later elaborated by Clifford of a "Mind Stuff." By the word mind he implies that it stands for an entity. Whereas we must emphatically insist that it stands for a function. There is a function in experience, which thoughts perform. That function is "knowing." Consciousness is supposed necessary to explain the fact that things not only are, but are known.

An undivided bit of experience, taken in one content of associates, plays the part of a knower, of a state of mind, or consciousness. While in a different content the same undivided bit of experience plays the part of a thing known, of an objective content. In one group is figures as a thought, in another group as a thing. And since it can figure in both groups, simultaneously, we have every right to speak of it as subjective and objective both at once. The old dualism as reinterpreted in terms of experience, instead of being mysterious and elusive, becomes verifiable and concrete. It is an affair of relations. It falls outside not inside the single experience considered, and can always be particularized and defined.

This thought was illustrated by reference to our "perceptual experience." The philosophy of perception ever since the time of Democritus has been one of the famous battle grounds of thought. Men could not understand how. What is evidently one reality, should be in two places at once—both in outer space and in a person's mind. A point can be on two lines if it is situated at their intersection. Similarly if the "pure experience" of an object were a place of intersection of two processes it could be regarded as belonging to each and remain all the time, a numerically single thing.

The same law may be observed among concepts, or non-perceptual experience. This also may be shown to be all consciousness in one taking, and, in the other all content. As "subjective" we may say that experience represents, as objective that it is represented. What represents and what is represented is here numerically the same.

This consciousness denotes a kind of external relation, and does not denote a special stuff or way of being. This peculiarity of our experiences, that they not only are, but are known, is best explained by their relations—these relations themselves being experiences—to one another. Experience is only a collective name for the sensible natures of the things of which we are aware. And save for time, space and perhaps being (which the speaker regarded as phases of reality) there appears no uni-

R.V.C.

Dr. Perrin has gone to Burlington where he will give a lecture on Strauss before the Kilfa Club, this evening

At a meeting of the Athletic Association held at one o'clock Thursday the question of hockey was brought up. It was decided that inter-year hockey matches should be played after Christmas. The following were elected managers:—4th year, Miss Armstrong; 3rd year, Miss McCaw, and year, Miss Demuth; 1st year, Miss McCormick.

Miss Trapp, fancy skating manager, reported that Miss Baker-Edwards had been secured for a coach. It was then decided that fancy skating should not count for the trophy. Therefore the Club should be supported by subscription of members, and not by years. The managers for fancy skating are: 3rd year, Miss Cameron; 2nd year, Miss De Correvont; 1st year, Miss Sproule.

The question of changing the programme for Sports Day to conform with the new two-day arrangement was considered. There were no suggestions, and it decided to leave this to the Athletic Committee and the Sports managers.

It was also decided that some change should be made regarding the winning of the large R.V.C.'S now that no more outside matches were to be played. This was left over for the Athletic Committee to decide.

on by the assembly and it fell to Vergniaud's lot to pronounce the result.

Vergniaud and the Girondists here come into active opposition with the Jacobins or the party of the Mountain. To make a long story short, he with twenty-two others were condemned and sentenced to death. They ascended the guillotine one by one, and Vergniaud, last of all, felt the executioner's still. The third paper was on Robespierre and was read by Mr. Struthers. Unfortunately time and space prevent a resume' of this paper. Mr. Struthers' 'magnum opus' however, exhibited the same qualities of those which preceded it. The reader, evidently, had spent much time on its preparation. His effort was much appreciated by the members of the Club.

The Historical Club welcomed last night for the first time Dr. Todd, who is connected with the History courses at McGill. It is the first time he has been present but the members all hope it will not be the last.

THINGS THEATRICAL

SARAH BERNHARDT IN "LA TOSCA" AT NEW STRAND THEATRE.

LARGE AUDIENCE GREETED GENEE AT HIS MAJESTY'S

Adeline Genée was greeted by a very different audience at His Majesty's last Friday from that which saw her at the Monument National the previous Monday. Apart from a few seats in the gallery, every seat in the Guy St. Theatre was filled.

Ms. Genée had a most enthusiastic reception, and she left for Quebec the same afternoon.

YSAYE PLAYED AT PRINCESS

The Princess Theatre was more than crowded on Monday night when Ysaye appeared in Montreal for the first time in seven years. So great was the demand for seats that many people paid for standing room in the gallery or seats on the stage.

Ysaye's playing aroused as great enthusiasm as ever, and the pianoforte work of his accompanist, M. Camille Decréus, was spoken of with admiration.

"THE LITTLE PARISIENNE" WILL SHOW AT ORPHEUM

A novel and pretentious musical comedy production, "The Little Parisienne" is to be the headliner at the Orpheum next week, an offering which entails the engagement of a company of fourteen persons, headed by Valerie Service, well known in the United States as a popular artist.

Andrew Kelly, the Irish comedian, will furnish a line of patter which has amused audiences in many theatres on the Keith circuit, and Gordon Eldred and Company will be seen in "Won By A Leg", a most laughable sketch. A European acrobatic novelty will be given by Ergotti and Lilliputians, a turn which is full of action and unusual feats; and Laura Buckley will sing a variety of songs, interspersed with original stories. Julia Gonzales, the aerialist, comes with a feature of great picturesqueness, a regular thriller.

UNIQUE SHOW AT THE PRINCESS NEXT WEEK

"The Passing Show of 1912," which will be seen at the Princess next week, is said to surpass all the previous efforts of the Messrs. Shubert. Coming direct from a phenomenal run of six months at the famous Winter Garden, New York, it should prove a special attraction at Montreal.

As its name suggests, the play is a review of the important theatrical events of the year, treated in a humorous way. "Bunty Pulls The Strings," "The Quaker Girl," "Kismet," and other hits, are included in burlesque form.

The company comprises such stars as Trixie Fragonza, Charles J. Ross, Adelaide and Hughes, Clarence Harvey, Charlotte Greenwood, Eugene and Willie Howard, Moon and Morris, Sidney Grand and others.

"THAT FRESHIE"

Her eyes were blue—her face was fair. She had a head of golden hair. My hand in hers—her hand in mine. Her lips were red—her smile divine. But—crash!—a slipper hit my head. It's half past eight, get out of bed! Poor Freshie!—fussing as it seems. Is not allowed—no, not in dreams.

Nice People

A story which is declared to be strictly true is told in "Public Opinion" by a high official in North Nigeria, where, though it is British, cannibalism still exists.

A native chief was found dead and the district commissioner an Englishman, acting as coroner, summoned a jury of twelve natives to hold an inquest. The jury being unable to come to a decision, the coroner locked them up and went to lunch. When he came back he found that the jury, who were also hungry, had eaten the deceased. He wrote to the Chief Commissioner: "Kindly send instructions for my next step, as the Proclamation does not seem to provide for this incident."

The Sun Life of Canada will not insure North Nigerians.
